

The Butterfly Program

Established 1983

John T. MacRoy

1278 Kamery Rd. Olean, NY 14760

716-372-8695

An all day educational program showing exotic, beautiful butterflies from all over the earth. An exciting slide presentation.

Concepts

Educational Exhibits

World Geography

Scientific Principles

Cultural Concepts

North America

South America

Asia

Papua New Guinea

Ghana, West Africa

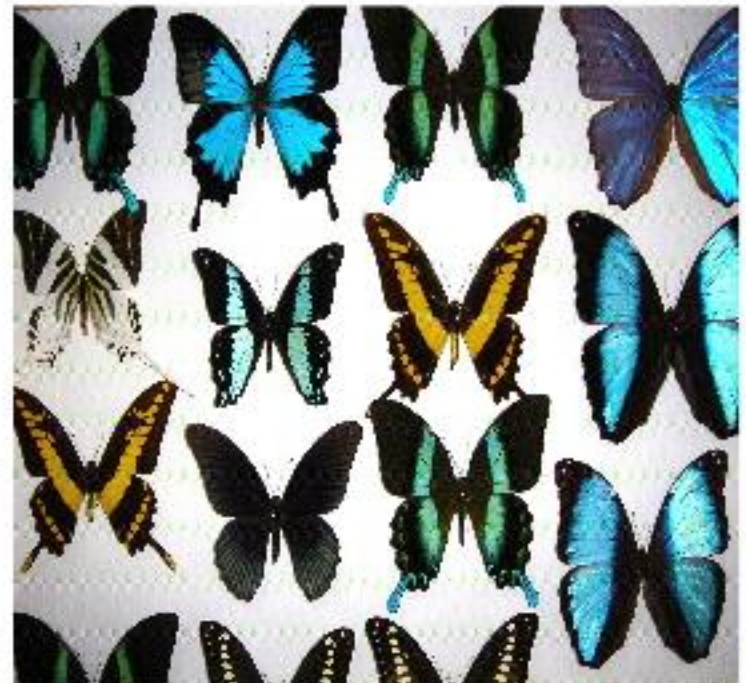

Local

Rational: This program is structured for the primary and middle intermediate grades although senior high school students can benefit on a discretionary basis.

Much of the content and format is geared to the basic curriculum areas of natural science, geography, social sciences and the humanities. This program also emphasized the fact that we are an interdependent global community.

Students are offered the opportunity to view and examine a natural display which is not open to the general population.

It is the hope of the program director that the physical, mental, and visual representations will stimulate the young mind as well as create an understanding and appreciation for their own natural environment.

John MacRoy is an educator with several years of classroom experience in the elementary setting.

He is a graduate of the State University College at Buffalo and St. Bonaventure University. He has held a long term interest in art and natural history since childhood especially in nature's aesthetic offerings.